

Weather and Radar Apps

Not sure what me think about this maybe because it's getting close to the season. Back in 2006 actually March 12th I was driving from Kanas City to Springfield Missouri at night. My flight into KC had to be rerouted due to a tornado hitting around the airport. I remember landing and getting my rental car. As I drove I saw the aftermath with debris all over the place.

I turned the radio on to hear local news and weather. Next thing I heard was the National Weather Service issuing tornado warnings for counties. Please think back to 2006, you either had a flip phone, maybe a Treo or a Blackberry neither of them had a weather app. So here I am driving and didn't have a clue what county I was in, after dark and oh did I mention 38 confirmed Tornadoes the most ever in a single day in Missouri.

Fast forward to today do you have weather and radar apps on your phone? I use "My Radar" and "The Weather Channel" apps. I really love the "My Radar" app which also gives me weather alerts plus earthquake info when I am in California and hurricane information when home. "The Weather Channel" also does a nice job with their future radar, alerts, lighting tracker to just name a few features.

There are 100's of weather apps in the Apple and Google store, do you have a favorite? Please share, I would like to know your thoughts. Don't have a weather app? Get one!
